Chapter 1 by OmegaPhotoshopFlowey

A tall man in a black robe walked around the seemingly endless halls of his 'True Laboratory.' This place was well to be considered as his home and workplace, simply because he lived and worked here all his life. It was a true passion to experiment and research all the possibilities that could be used in the future. Some things would have to be kept hidden though...

Like the fact that he had been injecting 'determination' into a few flowers. That experiment had done him wonders and disasters. One subject, Subject #637, had seemed to become alive, even without a soul. That was one of the most successful runs he'd done so far. It escaped a few days after though. He didn't know how since he had put the subject in a solid glass container that was claimed to be 'unbreakable.' He would have to make a complaint to the company sooner or later. Besides that fact, the subject was a FLOWER, so how could it have gotten away? Did #637 grow legs, gain super strength, break the glass, and escape without being seen? That was unthinkable, and a childish answer at that. Not even determination could have the power to do such things.

The man finally made it to an archway that led to his greatest inventions, the Core. The Core
